

GOAL 10: REDUCED INEQUALITIES

Age, sex, ability, race, ethnicity, origin, religion and socio-economic status are all important aspects of our identity. However, in many ways, our identity can impact our income, along with our political, social and economic participation in daily life. Sustainable Development Goal 10 is all about reducing these inequalities to encourage prosperity and income growth within and between countries. We can achieve this by making sure our attitudes, policies and behaviours ensure equal opportunities, respect for human rights and inclusivity.

FOR TEACHING THE
SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS

FROM HOME

What could I do to teach my child about this goal?

For your child in elementary:

Read the Goats of Anarchy comic book with your child (or better yet, have them read it!) to teach concepts around differing abilities and inequality. The comic also includes discussion questions at the end.

For your child in middle years:

Remember Every Plate Tells a Story from SDG 3: Good Health & Well-being? Try this extension activity, The Human Face of Food, which will stimulate your child to think about the agricultural, rural, and fishing industries that produce food across the world. Inspire your child to not only consider the environmental impacts of these industries but also the social impacts on equality, economic growth and human rights for those that work within them.

For your child in high school:

Explore forced migration and the refugee experience through Children On The Move. Your teen will build an understanding of what life is like for people forced to flee their homes and understand that migration has and continues to affect everyone.
